Even the devil himself couldn't get men to this until he baited the hook with a woman.

The man who tries to please his wife as hard as he used to before he married her need never fear the divorce courts or a rival.

Whether a boy will respect laws or not is determined by whether he will obey at home or not.

I have no faith in the woman who talks of heaven and makes a hell out of her home. If I were going to investigate your piety I should ask your cook.

Of all the sentences that crawled out of hell, I think that this should be seen and not heard: "The rottenest. Forget it, forget it!"

I have never aspired to hold but one office and that is to be a member of the school board and the first thing I would do would be to raise the salaries of the teachers and pay them 12 months a year.

If you know anything about anybody keep your mouth shut. You would be mighty glad if anybody had anything on you and they kept their mouths shut.

If some of you folks would go through your homes and yank out the books from your library shelves that have no business there and burn them like they did in Ephesus in the days of Paul, some of you wouldn't have enough paper left in your house to bang your old hair or wad a shotgun.

"I never in all my life" said the Rev. Billy Sunday last night "saw more high-powered, high-priced, luxurious cars in a city of its size than I have seen here in Tulsa. I have never seen fewer tin lizzies than I have here. You must have the dough. You can't get stood off for 'em. For God's sake, don't come here and throw a few pennies in the collection plate. It doesn't look good to be a tight-wad in God's sight—no sir!"

—Who would be a darned sight better off if you didn't have your scrapers here in Tulsa if you can't have the morals to support them. Don't you think you came to Tulsa to drill and drill until you strike oil-producing sand? Don't think you came to Tulsa to wear a path between your home and your store—not on your life! You came to build a home, that's what you came for and don't you forget it! No city can raise above its homes, no nation can rise above its homes and no man can rise above the individuals that make it!

Before he began his sermon on the home last night, Rev. Sunday said briefly about the swift succession of events at the disarmament conference Saturday.

"Hughes is a fast worker," he said "I rejoiced to read," he said "that the conference was opened with prayer by my good friend Rev. W. R. Abernathy. I was glad to know that Secretary Hughes led 'em to it. We sure threw on the bull-rope and cleaned 'em out in five minutes and know right off our position. Yes sir, we're fast workers here. When we get started going, we go fast."

Then he took a leaf out of the records and slipped them in between the pages of Tulsa's revival history.

Mr. Harding asked how civilization ever could justify the destruction of the late war. If desire for peace is so strong, he asked, why make us do something to get rid of war, because the excessive destruction can't appeal to you to be decent because it's right perhaps you'll be decent because of the excessive cost of sin."

Laity's Advice Is Not Needed, Admiral Says

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—"Suggestions from the laity as to how the Washington conference on limitation of armaments should be conducted and the sending of criticisms and petitions to the delegations by persons who know little or nothing about armament problems will not help speed the conference to success," declared Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, speaking last night at an American Legion dinner.

"The four men selected to represent this country at the conference are the pick of the nation and are thoroughly capable," he said, "and they will be assisted by a large corps of advisers."

The people have not given the profound thought to the subject of armaments that they should, he asserted, and they do not have a clear conception of the real meaning of armament. He declared that a municipal police force is a form of armament which protects honest and peaceful citizens from robbers and outlaws.

HEAD OF JOPLIN BANK IS SUICIDE

SAYS BANK SOLVENT

Missouri Comptroller Is in Charge Pending Full Investigation

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 12.—Heavy loss incurred in an unprofitable investment was today believed to be the reason for the suicide of Amor Gibson, 57, president of the First National Bank of Joplin, Mo. Gibson shot himself through the head at the Regis hotel yesterday and left a note saying he was "lonely, alone, and that the Joplin bank was solvent."

The banker, it was learned, was negotiating for purchase of the Regis hotel and was reported to have received a letter announcing a heavy loss in a bad investment in the states. Following this information he went to his room and shot himself.

Gibson had $90,000 in the vaults of the hotel for safekeeping. He is the father of three daughters and was formerly vice president of the First National Bank of Kansas City.

JOPLIN, Mo., Nov. 12.—The First National Bank of this city is placed in the hands of the state comptroller of currency today at a meeting of the board of directors which it had been learned that Amor Gibson, its president, had committed suicide in Mexico City.

Gibson, it was revealed in a telegram from Mexico City, left a letter stating that he had taken his life because he was absolutely worn out. The letter read:

Suicide Leaves Letter.

"I am absolutely worn out. Have never done anything wrong. Am alone. Must quit. My bank, Joplin, absolutely all right. Have more than $50,000 in hotel. Send $75,000 to C. B. McCluskey, Midwest Reserve Trust company, Kansas City. Send $10,000 First National Bank, Joplin."

"Deed to my lot, Mount Washington cemetery, Joplin, in my desk. Wire my daughter, Mrs. Wallace Wilson, Joplin. Balance money paid damage to hotel. I love everyone but am worn out."

The money Gibson reported he had with him was in travelers' checks.

Gibson is well known in Tulsa and Muskogee, having at one time been part owner of the Turner hotel in the latter city.

Second 'Mystery' Raid On State Officials Rumored at Capitol

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 12.—An echo of the recent "mystery raid" in which county officers were alleged to have arrested a state official who gave an alleged gambling game was a district judge in Oklahoma.

Five men were arrested by the police who broke into a room in a local hotel where the alleged game was in progress. The names given were T. W. Jones, G. H. Gibson, J. T. Broome, John Mitchell and B. D. Bailey. Police said they thought all the names were fictitious. Police said they found $70 and a pile of poker chips on the table.

FIGHTING SPIRIT MADE TULSA GROW

Will Be Again Evidenced at the Spavinaw Mass Meeting Monday

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS

Tulsa Boosters Are Expected to Crowd the Billy Sunday Tabernacle to the Doors

Everyone that lived or stayed in Tulsa during the war and a citizen of the Tulsa "fightin' spirit." Everyone who witnessed the frequent and enthusiastic demonstrations of that spirit knows it is unquestionable that it is the most important factor in the growth of Tulsa. It is the spirit that made Tulsa grow from a two-by-four village, almost unknown from the vision of passing cattlemen by a road to a metropolitan city known all over the world for its phenomenal growth and its transformation to modernity.

It is here that some of the most important events of the war took place. It is here that the Tulsa "fightin' spirit" was demonstrated in a way that has made it a permanent part of the city's history. It is the spirit that made Tulsa grow from a two-by-four village, almost unknown from the vision of passing cattlemen by a road to a metropolitan city known all over the world for its phenomenal growth and its transformation to modernity.

PURE FOOD WEEK HERE

Grocers of Tulsa Will Display all Leading Brands of Foods, and Offer Generous Discounts

This is Tulsa's first annual pure food week.

Commencing Monday and continuing until Saturday night Tulsa's leading grocery stores will feature demonstrations of particular brands of edibles so as to acquaint the Tulsa housewife with the very latest in the culinary lines.

A canvass made late Saturday of the leading stores showed that every grocer in Tulsa is ready and willing to participate in the pure food movement. The merchants anticipate that eager crowds will be thronging through their aisles Monday morning.

Many stores will feature special displays of feature brands.

Low prices and special inducements will feature the co-operation between all the leading grocers in the pure food movement. Housewives are urged to do their shopping early and visit the stores each day as many firms have made arrangements to change their programs daily.

TULSA GETS CONVENTION

Veterans of 90th Division Association Will Meet Here in 1922.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Nov. 12.—Tulsa, Okla., was selected as the 1922 meeting place of the 90th Division association, which concluded a two-day convention here today.

Mike Hogg of Houston was elected president and other officers chosen include Ted Barry of Hugo, Okla., second vice president, and Floyd O. Burnett, Oklahoma City, chairman.

The world war veterans before adjournment adopted a resolution denouncing as untrue charges made in the senate recently by Senator Watson of Georgia, concerning the alleged treatment of soldiers in the A. E. F.

Bet Tulsa Has Greatest Vote Water Election

With Oklahoma City early its waterworks improvement bond election on November 26 by a greater majority than Tulsa carries the Spavinaw bonds on November 29.

Every loyal Tulsan is inclined to ignore such a question.

Yet there are some at Oklahoma City who believe their city will prevail.

Every loyal Tulsan knows Tulsa will "put Oklahoma City in the shade" when the total vote cast at the two respective elections are counted. And Water Commissioner C. S. Younkman made this known when the other day he decided to let Oklahoma City know Tulsa's intentions.

Here is the telegram he sent to Oklahoma City's bond campaign committee:

"Tulsa expects to carry Spavinaw water bond issue by greater majority than Oklahoma City gave in her election this month. Do you offer any odds on this proposition?"

And right back came the reply from Leonard Bailey, chairman of the Oklahoma City campaign committee:

"Tread and butter vote will prevail. Two to one that Oklahoma City bonds win by bigger majority than Tulsa."

Any time that Oklahoma City thinks she'll carry her bond issue by bigger majority than Tulsa, she'll have to get up and step. That's what Younkman declared when he read the message.

Are going to show that Oklahoma City's bond issue is going to give so much bigger majority that we'll give 'em a headache.

CRITICAL STAGE OF IRISH PARLEY IS EMPHASIZED

Cabinet Finds Craig's Proposals Unacceptable, Is Report

LONDON STILL OPTIMISTIC

Newspapers Do Not Believe Reply Slams Door to Further Negotiations

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The critical stage of the Irish negotiation was emphasized today as the British cabinet went into session to consider the reply of the Ulster premier, Sir James Craig, to the compromise proposals offered by Lord George.

In which Craig said Ulster would definitely decline to enter an all-Ireland parliament.

At Lord George's official residence in Downing street, it was stated the premier was still hopeful of finding a solution of the Irish question.

Prominent unionists, who have backed the British premier in his endeavor to bring agreement between the Sinn Fein and Ulster representatives, said they were not sympathetic toward Craig's latest move, which has threatened to throw the Irish situation back to where it was before Lord George called the two Irish factions into conference at a dinner from Londonderry today said if peace negotiations fail, three days notice of the termination of the truce would be given before hostilities are resumed.

Britain, United States and Japan Named by Hughes to Take Part in Disarmament

By GEORGE W. HOLMES, I. N. A. Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—With a suddenness that left the great statesmen of the world literally gasping for breath, Secretary of State Hughes proposed officially to Great Britain and Japan today that they join with the United States in scrapping all big battleships now building or contemplated and enter into a "10-year naval holiday."

The startling proposal came within an hour after the opening of the momentous armament conference within a few minutes after the election of the American secretary of state to chairmanship of the conference and it found the statesmen and naval experts of Great Britain and Japan unprepared to either accept or reject the proposals.

Make No Comment.

Great Britain made no comment at all when Hughes finished and Japan contented herself by making a few stereotyped remarks about how glad she was to be here in Washington and how willing she was to "co-operate with other nations to accomplish the aims of the conference."

The immediate effect of the American proposals, it adopted, would be to leave the navies of the world in relatively the same position as they are now in. Great Britain slightly in the lead, America second, with Japan bringing up the rear, considerably behind the United States.

The conference lasted slightly less than two hours and at its conclusion the delegates hurried to their respective headquarters for consultation.

Secretary Hughes spoke in his official capacity as chairman of the American delegation and submitted a complete plan for the limitation of naval armaments in his opening address. The plan had previously been worked out by American naval advisers.

Secretary Hughes' proposal applied only to the United States, Great Britain and Japan, the agreement stating that owing to the peculiar position of France and Italy, they would be invited to join the conference at a later date.

It came as a bombshell to all except the inner circles of the American government.

Just before he made his history-making proposals, Secretary Hughes was elected general chairman of the conference, and his speech in a dual capacity as official head of the American delegation and also of the conference.

It was not expected that the Americans would take the lead in the conference.

How Delegates At Parley Look On Hughes Note

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—"As a basis for discussion" the proposal for disarmament was today by Secretary Hughes, an "acceptable and desirable" Baron Admiral Kato of the Japanese delegation to the conference stated. Admiral Kato said Japan's attitude towards the proposal could not be definitely stated until they have been completely studied.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—From a very high diplomatic source it was learned this afternoon that Great Britain is prepared to accept in the main the proposals made by Secretary of State Hughes today concerning naval limitation. While members of the British delegation declined to make a statement, it was learned on unquestioned authority that Great Britain is extremely favorably disposed toward the whole American proposition and probably will approve it.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The most courageous statement ever made at the opening of an international conference, was the characterization of Premier Ireland, of France, this afternoon, of Secretary Hughes' naval limitation proposal.

"The technical experts who will study the plans for naval disarmament, will now have a concrete platform on which to work."

"The Washington conference could not have started under better auspices than those afforded by the honest, straightforward speech of President Harding and the bold address of Secretary Hughes."

"This is the first time that we have had opportunity to hear outlined a complete program for limitation of naval armaments. I must admit that the proposal, with which America has entered upon her task was a very pleasant surprise to all of us."

PRESIDENT OPENS ARMAMENT MEET

Welcomes Delegates From Many Nations Sitting in Conference

WOULD OUTLAW WAR

He Would Like Resources of World Turned Into Constructive Channels

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Gathered with the chosen representatives of nine nations about him, President Harding opened the conference on limitation of armaments pronounced its keynote—the creed of America in all the deliberations—in those words:

"The United States welcomes you with unselfish hands. We harbor no fears; we have no arid ends to serve; we suspect no enemy; we contemplate or apprehend no conquest; we wish what we have, we seek nothing that is another's. We only wish to do with you that finer, nobler thing, which no nation can do alone. We wish to sit with you at the table of international understanding and good will. In good conscience we are eager to meet you frankly and invite and offer co-operation. The world demands a color contemplation of the existing order and the realization that there can be no cure without sacrifice, not by one of us, but by all of us. I do not mean surrendered rights or narrowed freedom or denied aspirations or limited national hopes. Our republic would no more ask for more than it would give. No pride need be humbled, no nationality submerged but I would have a moment's pause committing all of us to less preparation for war and more enjoyment of fortunate peace."

The delegates at the main table followed the reading line by line, from copies they had.

Sentiments Applauded.

The audience and some of the delegates came to their feet, applauding when Mr. Harding declared America wanted "less of armament and more of war," and wanted to work to that end.

General Harding took his place with the advisory committee and was quickly surrounded by representatives of the army with whom he was associated.

Secretary Hughes sat in the center of the tables with a white slab of marble and a small gavel in front of him. At his right in order were

SCHEME OUTLINED

Official Document Presented at First Day of Conference

CUT IN NAVAL FORCES

Result Would Leave Three Nations in Present Condition for 10 Years

FIXES NUMBER OF SHIPS

If Proposal Is Agreed to Nations Involved Would Limit All Armaments

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The program of the United States government for limitation of naval armaments outlined by Secretary Hughes, has been shown here today.

The official document outlining the administration scheme which is the basic feature of the armament conference, is now in the hands of the leaders of the delegations representing the five participating powers.

Following is an exact quotation from this document:

"The United States proposes the following plan for a limitation of the naval armaments of the conferring nations. The United States believes this plan safely guards the interests of all concerned."

In working out this proposal the United States has been guided by four general principles:

(a) The limitation of all capital ship building programs, either actual or projected.

(b) Further reduction through the scrapping of certain of the older ships.

(c) That regard should be had to the existing naval strength of the conferring nations.

(d) The use of capital ship tonnage as the measurement of strength for navies and a proportionate allowance of auxiliary combatant craft prescribed.

PROMOTION—CAPITAL SHIPS. Limitation of naval armaments.

United States.

"1. The United States to scrap all new capital ships now under construction and on their way to completion. This includes six battle cruisers and seven battleships on order. The grand total of capital ships to be scrapped is 20, aggregating $45,740 tons.

"2. Great Britain at once further construction on the four new Hoods."

(Note: Paragraph 3 involves a reduction of four new capital ships not yet laid down, but upon which $10,000,000 has been expended.)

OKLAHOMA COUNTY SHERIFF SANCTIONED MANUFACTURE AND SALE OF LIQUOR.

Jurors Find.

OKMULGEE, Okla., Nov. 12.—Lon Kuhn, sheriff of Oklahoma county, was found guilty of misconduct in office by a jury in superior court tonight after four hours' deliberation. The conviction came at the end of the sheriff's third trial, the first having been halted when a juror was taken ill. The second was a mistrial.

The third trial was in the accusation against the sheriff. The jury found him guilty on three of four counts and not guilty on the fourth count. Their verdict was unanimous as to each count.

The suit was of civil nature and Mr. Kuhn is subject to removal from office. He has been under suspension since September 8, when the county attorney James Hepburn filed the accusation at the request of the county commissioners.

There were 10 counts in which the jury found him guilty was that he delivered or that a whisky still was delivered with his knowledge and consent, to George Kirkman, a close friend of Mr. Kuhn and who testimony showed, had sold and made whisky ever before Mr. Kuhn's administration. The evidence in the case in this connection was that J. H. Stormont gave Kirkman a part of a still at the request of Sheriff Kuhn.

Another count upon which he was found guilty charged him with failing to enforce the liquor laws of the state in that he permitted George Kirkman to manufacture whisky with his knowledge and consent.
